The study aims to explore the practices of catering for learning diversity in small class teaching in two primary schools in Hong Kong. Findings of studies will provide insights on how to cater for learning diversity in inclusive education in small class setting.